Thermae

Since Roman time these waters are considered excellent to give people "Salus per Aquam" associating the idea of beauty to water, symbol of purity and transparency.

The salty-bromine-iodine water of Galzignano Terme comes from the uncontaminated basins of the Dolomites and Lessini Mountains in the Italian Pre-Alps. It arrives till us, flowing into limestone rocks reaching a depth of 3.000 meters, through an underground route which is 80 km long. While doing it, the water enriches beneficial minerals: it takes about 30 years to resurface in our spas to a temperature of 87° C.

The water, used in balneotherapy, thermal pools and inhalation therapy, is essential for the development, conservation and regeneration of the thermal mud.

The clay of a small lake near Arquà Petrarca and that water create this natural compound that acts on the immune system making the body tougher by toning, detoxifying and improving the general condition of the organism thanks to its muscle-relaxant action.

The clay, kept immersed in specific maturation tanks for a minimum of three months, absorbs all the therapeutic properties of the water and becomes mature mud to be used in treatments.

Our waters, our muds.
